

When I Pick Up My Wings from the Dry Cleaner (Paperback)

By Lisa J Cihlar

1st World Publishing, United States, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Winner of the 2013 Blue Light Poetry Prize Lisa J. Cihlar s poems have appeared in Blackbird, The South Dakota Review, Green Mountains Review, Crab Creek Review, and Southern Humanities Review. She has been twice nominated for a Pushcart Prize. Her chapbook, The Insomniac s House, is available from Dancing Girl Press and a second chapbook, This is How She Fails, is available from Crisis Chronicles Press. She lives in rural southern Wisconsin. When I first encountered Lisa Cihlar s poetry, I sensed an electricity in the air, a subterranean movement that insinuated itself up from the ground into my bones. And then I felt flooded, suddenly, with the wonder only great art inspires. Cihlar s poetry is full of muscle and sinew, power and verve, a voice so undeniable that it wraps itself around your synaptic connections and becomes indelible, essential. This is poetry of the highest order, of the most terrific, breath-stripping power. Her music will carpe diem your mind; her characters, larger than life, Swampy Woman et al, will stride as powerfully as some female Paul Bunyan across...
